Nurturing Space

In appreciation of the gentler half of society and because we are concerned about the families of our employees as much as we are about our employees, ProgressSoft Corporation introduced The Busy Bees Nursery to provide an exciting world of exploration and discovery for the children of working moms.

From the moment of arriving to work in the morning until leaving in the afternoon, ProgressSoft mothers have the utmost peace of mind knowing that their children are only a few steps away and well taken care of by our highly dedicated staff that supports them through their first steps of development.

The Busy Bees Nursery has proven not only to be the right thing to do in terms of world-class standards, but the smart thing to do because, today, our little bumblebees are at the heart of ProgressSoft, bringing utter amusement and joy.

Foreword from the CEO

We believe in human-centered practices that embrace working women, those who are transitioning from being working women to working mothers – and working mothers, and that is why we launched The Busy Bees Nursery in 2015 to support them through every step of that journey.

For several years now, we have been providing the supportive environment needed to make motherly duties trouble-free, while ensuring that children's well-being and development is of utmost priority – and it gives me great pleasure that our staff is a part of that journey.

To our little busy bees...

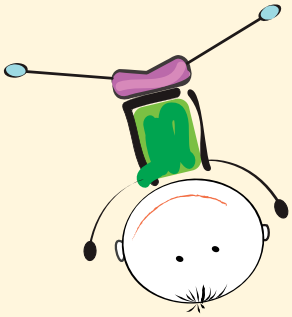

You are at the heart of what we do, and we will continue to make every effort to ensure that you get the best start in life – in the meantime, thank you for adding joy to ours.

To Our Queen Bees

It takes big hearts to shape little minds!

Thank you for guiding us,
inspiring us and helping us grow.

Mona Rayahin

My experience with our little bees the past five years has been the "cherry on top" of my career as an educator. From day one I fell in love and have been falling in love with them every day.
They give of themselves…
They love unconditionally…
They don't think twice as they express their feelings not wanting anything in return.
Most importantly, these busy bees have taught me to "stop and smell the roses", and for that I will forever be grateful.

Rana Maslamani

Working with our little bees has taught me to see the world in a positive way. From them, I have learned:

- How to ask for help when I am stuck
- How to apologize when I make a mistake
- How to help when someone needs help
- How to show appreciation when I'm thankful
- How to say I love you when I love someone

Most importantly, I learned that play is our brain's favorite way of learning, and it's the most important work children have. Working with children is a two-way street, with endless learning for all!

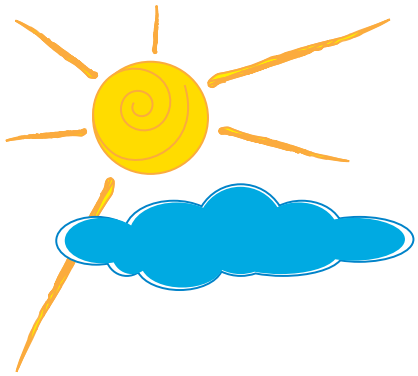

Suha Haddad

I feel that this stage in a child's life is very important for building a strong personality, and my role in their lives has been essential in this process. In helping our little bees grow and develop strong personalities, I have grown and developed my skills as a giving, nurturing individual. I have, also, learnt that, even though the responsibility of raising the busy bees has been a shared role, and no matter how qualified and competent the nursery teacher is, she surely will not be able to fully play the role that the mother plays - the mother's tenderness cannot be compensated for by anyone else.

Reina Aboudi

Ever since my first day at The Busy Bees Nursery, I have often asked myself "What am I doing here?". I wondered…should I be loving, disciplining, or teaching to help in raising a better generation that will create a brighter tomorrow? I have realized that I have one of the greatest, most fulfilling jobs in the world – and the gratifications are endless. The answer to my question is that I am giving love and receiving love, disciplining and being disciplined, educating and being educated – the hearts and minds of our little bees are uniquely beautiful in their own ways, and it's a wonderful thing working with and for them.

Afaf Ayoub

The Busy Bees Nursery is my second family, and I am so proud to be a part of it. Each child is special and charismatic in their own way; interacting with them is so wonderful!
